ON THE COVER:
Rhéa Ming, champion of the West Virginia Poetry Out Loud State Finals in May. Portrait by Melissa C. Ming.
In 1785, Scottish poet Robert Burns penned the classic line, “The best laid schemes o’ Mice an’ Men Gang aft agley.” For more than two centuries, his words have been used to affirm that things don’t always go according to plan.

For instance, the West Virginia State Poetry Out Loud Finals were scheduled for Friday, March 13 and Saturday, March 14, 2020. March 12th was a flurry of last-minute activity. The finishing touches were being put on programs. Gift bags for champions and teachers were being assembled. In the State Theater, tech crews made sure everything was in place for performances and judging. Around the state, hundreds of folks – including high school Poetry Out Loud champs, parents, teachers, judges, and guest performers – prepared to descend on the Culture Center for this well-loved annual event.

Then, it seemed, the world came to a standstill. The rising spread of COVID-19 led to a decision to cancel large events due to the risk of infection at an event with many people in close proximity, like the Poetry Out Loud finals. Understandably, participants were disappointed. But despite the lack of an in-person state final, 2020 has been a stellar year for Poetry Out Loud.

Poetry Out Loud (POL) is a national competition in which high school students memorize and perform classical and contemporary poetry selected from the POL Anthology. The process begins at the high school level with students participating in classroom and school-wide contests. The winners of those competitions are eligible to compete in the state finals.

In the 2019-2020 school year, 131 educators led poetry competitions in 50 high schools. Nearly five thousand West Virginia students participated in these competitions. Buffalo, Elkins, Scott, and Spring Valley High Schools were new or rejoining participants this year, along with the St. James Homeschoolers.

In order to honor the skill and talent of those students who excelled in their high school competitions, West Virginia’s POL coordinator, Jim Wolfe, and the State Arts Office staff rallied to create a video-based state final. Twenty-eight high school champions submitted recitation videos of their three selected poems, which were sorted into online playlists for each round. All students’ video performances were judged by a panel of five judges, using the standard Poetry Out Loud evaluation criteria. An accuracy score was also given, as usual. This online format also allowed judges to provide written feedback for students and teachers for the first time.

Judges for the 2020 State Final included writer, songwriter and performer Colleen Anderson; Amy Alvarez, poet and professor at West Virginia University; Marc Harshman, the state’s poet laureate; novelist and educator Rajia Hassib; and Dr. Joel Peckham, poet and professor at Marshall University.

Rhéa Ming from Spring Mills High School in Martinsburg (Berkeley County) was declared champion for her recitations of “For the Dogs Who Barked at Me on the Sidewalks in Connecticut” by Hanif Abdurraqib, “A Thank-You Note” by Michael Ryan, and “Sonnet 29: When, in disgrace with fortune and men’s eyes” by William Shakespeare.
Rhéa received $200 and the state champion trophy, plus an additional prize of $1000 being awarded by the Poetry Foundation this year due to the cancellation of the national Poetry Out Loud Finals. Spring Mills High School received $500 for the purchase of poetry books and materials.

Roy Williams from Wheeling Park High School (Ohio County) was runner-up and received $100 and a handmade trophy, and Wheeling Park High School received $200 for the purchase of poetry materials. Roy’s chosen poems were “The Idler” by Alice Moore Dunbar-Nelson, “Self-Portrait as So Much Potential” by Chen Chen, and “Analysis of Baseball” by May Swenson.

All students and teachers who were to have participated in the in-person event received works created by West Virginia artists. Base Camp Printing Company, located in Charleston, was commissioned to create handmade letterpress posters. Ceramic artist G.W. Lanham, a museum educator at the Huntington Museum of Art, made 6-inch by 6-inch “clay canvases” featuring an image of Emily Dickinson and a quote from her poetry. Matt Thomas of ThomasWork Studios in Gilmer County created the handmade trophies received by the champion and the runner up. By incorporating the work of West Virginia artisans and performing artists, the department seeks to nurture in each student a life-long appreciation for the arts.

Partnering with the National Endowment for the Arts and the Poetry Foundation, the West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History sponsors POL to encourage young people to learn about great poetry and explore their literary heritage while mastering public-speaking skills and building self-confidence.

Interview by Jack O’Hearn

“Iinnnnaattt C Cc ccu uurrriiioooss” Leads to New Endeavors for Beckley Artist

I first met Robby Moore a few years back when I was co-jurying an art exhibition at Apartment Earth Gallery in Charleston. His mixed-media piece, An Example of a Mouse, received the third-place prize. It was uniquely original, beautifully textural, mysteriously emotive, and quirky (in a good way). A few months later, Robby contacted me about grant opportunities through the State Arts Office. He later invited me to jury The Best of West Virginia exhibition at Tamarack, where he was the visual and performing arts manager at the time. A year later, I had a meeting with a community theatre group from Beckley called WV Collective. That’s when I learned that Robby was also a director, actor, and set designer. He had recently finished directing Little Shop of Horrors with them. Like many people I meet professionally, I got to know Robby little by little over time until we became friends.

Now the executive director for the Beckley Art Center, Robby has been leading the way in virtual exhibition programming since the challenges of crowd gathering restrictions and closures began. A graduate of Concord University, he has exhibited his artwork in numerous solo, group, and juried exhibitions throughout the state. He is the co-founder and board member of Treehouse Arts Ensemble, which has been producing cultural events, exhibitions, workshops, and children’s theatre in the Beckley area since 2004.

To sum up, Robby Moore is a multi-talented, multi-disciplinary, and an admirably modest artist and arts professional who contributes greatly to the arts and culture of his hometown. In this conversation, we discuss his life as an artist, director, set designer, and actor in West Virginia as well as his position at the Beckley Art Center and the virtual programming he has been developing.

Your resume shows a lengthy list of art exhibitions and theatre experience over the past ten years; 99% of this in West Virginia and the majority being local to the Beckley area. How would you describe the support for versatile artists like yourself not only in the city of Beckley but the entire state as well?

I feel very fortunate to have been received well in the West Virginia arts community. The arts scene in Beckley has grown since I started trying to promote and produce the arts in the area. There are dedicated supporters in Beckley that are always so appreciative, but there are still gaps in support. I’m sure there are some people that love the arts but maybe don’t know the level of great work that’s being produced here so they don’t seek it out. Or maybe they don’t know how dire it is to support artists in this area, as we are constantly on the cusp of losing not only artists but momentum. And of course, there are those that are just not interested. I have found most of those who are not interested feel like art is not meant for them. I feel that part of my job at the Beckley Art Center is to help change these perspectives. I strongly believe that the arts can and do enrich all of us.

Can you talk about some pivotal opportunities throughout your career?

I realized a long time ago that a career in the arts wasn’t all receptions and selling work to collectors. There are many roles that need to be filled to keep the arts alive. In college, I became really interested in arts administration. My first job that allowed me to explore that was at the West Virginia Dance Company (WVDC). Working at WVDC opened the door to working with non-profits, grant writing, fundraising, etc. Perhaps the most important thing I’ve come to realize is the importance of having artists in leadership positions. As an artist you inherently understand the artist experience and can better navigate their needs. Sometimes artists are not fully equipped or may just not be interested in navigating the business side of a career in the arts. The business side was never a part of my course work as an art major, but luckily, I had an innate curiosity. I am by no means an expert in the field, though I have found that just my interest in the business side has proven helpful in my own career as well as in facilitating other artists. I find working on the administrative side just as fulfilling as creating my own work.

When I started working at Tamarack in 2004, I got to meet artists from across the state. It gave me the tools to know how to navigate working as a professional artist, and the confidence I needed. It was good to... talk to artists and find out how they made their careers successful and to see the process from the gallery’s perspective.

At the very first FestivALL in 2005, I happened upon an exhibition hosted by a group of artists in a non-traditional space. I had finally met a group of artists that felt like they were my people. Just becoming their friend opened so many opportunities. Last year, I was invited to exhibit at the Clay Center and it was amazing to be among so many phenomenal WV artists. Working at the Beckley Art Center has allowed me to grow as a leader and has given me the chance to try new things and be creative as an arts administrator.

The Beckley Art Center has been releasing videos online since the start of closures and crowd limitations. They seem to have greatly improved in quality throughout that duration. What have you learned through this process?

The biggest lesson I have learned is to just jump in without fear. If your audience can see that you are growing and improving, they will forgive any initial lack of quality. It’s similar to live theatre when what you think are shortfalls, the audience likely hasn’t/won’t notice.

How has virtual programming either hindered or enhanced your success during this time?

Creating the virtual programming is time consuming. When we were completely closed, it was great to have something to offer our community because there was nothing available for us to offer in-person. We also had time to learn and develop ideas. Now that we are partially open and offering a few in-person programs again, it is a challenge fitting the virtual programming into the regular day-to-day duties. On the positive side, I feel like it has given me a new skillset that I can use in various parts of my career and life. For the Beckley Art Center, it has given us new life and added great value to our identity. I think it has also introduced us to many people that either weren’t aware of what we offered or may have had the wrong impression of who we are.

Thirty-four Arts Organizations in West Virginia Receive CARES Act Grants

The State Arts Office at the West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History (WVDACH) awarded $381,976 in Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act grants for arts organizations. Thirty-four arts organizations across the Mountain State qualified to receive grants for relief towards mortgage, rent, utilities, and staffing costs. Award amounts were based on each organization’s monthly expenses. Eligible arts organizations must have received a grant from the WVDACH in the past three years in the areas of Arts in Education, Community Arts, or Arts Partners.

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) was awarded a portion of the CARES Act stimulus package passed by the U.S. Congress. Funding was distributed to state arts agencies, including WVDACH, by the NEA to regrant to nonprofit arts organizations to preserve jobs and provide support during closures caused by COVID-19. WVDACH received a total of $430,000 in CARES Act funding from the Endowment.

West Virginia Arts Organizations Received CARES Act Funding Directly from the NEA

Five West Virginia nonprofit arts organizations were awarded funding through the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act grant program from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA). The $50,000 grant awards can be used for staff salaries, fees for artists and contractual personnel, and facilities costs.

Over 3,100 arts organizations across the county applied for this funding. Of those applications, 846 received grants. A total of $44.5 million was awarded to applicants in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. Eligible applicants were nonprofit arts organizations that had received grant funding directly from the National Endowment for the Arts in the past 4 years. Applications were accepted throughout the month of April, and grants were awarded on June 30, 2020.

“The National Endowment for the Arts, chaired by Mary Anne Carter, continues to be a constant and consistent partner to our agency. This funding will help these organizations maintain their missions during this uncertain time,” said Curator Randall Reid-Smith. “Its great news for West Virginia as these organizations serve residents all over the state. We are very thankful to Chairman Carter, Tom Simplot, and all of the staff at the Endowment.”

Here are the organizations in West Virginia that received this funding.

Gallery 35

Gallery 35: Art from the Mountain State features new work by West Virginia artists in each issue. If you are a West Virginia artist who would like your art shown in an upcoming issue, contact Jack O’Hearn at Jack.J.Ohearn@wv.gov for complete submission guidelines. To ensure the best reproduction, photos of your work should be jpg images that measure 2400 pixels on the longest side, if possible.

Provides emergency support for the acquisition, construction and renovation of arts venues, accessibility improvements and capital purchases of durable equipment.

Community Arts Project Support
Deadline: March 1
Provides support for projects in all disciplines that offer arts programming to the public and planning and organizational development projects that strengthen West Virginia arts organizations.

Professional Development for Artists
Deadline: February 1/October 1
Provides support for professional artist organizations seeking ways to expand or improve their work or share their experiences.

Training and Travel
Deadline: 6 weeks prior to project date
Provides financial assistance to artists, arts administrators and arts educators to attend seminars, conferences, workshops, and showcases outside of West Virginia.

Submit to ArtWorks!
Does your arts organization deserve to be in the spotlight? Are you an artist who attended a good conference or workshop? Do you have an idea for a great story? Whatever it is, email it to elizabeth.a.yeager@wv.gov with the subject “ArtWorks Submission” and your idea could be published in an upcoming issue of ArtWorks.

Peer Assistant Networks (PAN)
The West Virginia Commission on the Arts (WVCA) allows arts organizations two PAN sessions per year, free of charge. Sessions last an average of two to four hours and can range anywhere from starting a non-profit and organizational development, to marketing and fundraising strategies, to lighting design and festival planning. Sessions can involve an organization’s entire board of directors or only one to two staff members. The WVCA has a designated group of peer advisors that are paired to fit an organization’s needs. These advisors have experience in the arts community in West Virginia and expertise in a range of fields. For more information about the Peer Assistance Network, contact Jack O’Hearn at Jack.J.OHearn@wv.gov or (304) 558-0240.
Barbie Smoot is the Grants Officer and Budget Manager. She maintains the database and financial records for all grant applications and is responsible for compliance with all state and federal rules, regulations, and policies. Barbie.J.Smoot@wv.gov

Jim Wolfe is the Arts in Education Coordinator. He administers the Arts in Education grant program and is the state coordinator for Poetry Out Loud, a nation recitation contest for high school students. He is also the host of the monthly television show, ArtWorks. James.D.Wolfe@wv.gov

Elizabeth Yeager is the Individual Artist Coordinator. She provides technical assistance to artists and artists’ organizations and administers the division’s Professional Development for Artists and Artists’ Organization and Training & Travel grant programs. She also is the editor of the agency’s quarterly publication ArtWorks West Virginia. Elizabeth.A.Yeager@wv.gov
