Huntington Museum Acquires Sculpture by Artist Chaim Gross

The Huntington Museum of Art (HMA) is pleased to announce the acquisition of an important sculpture by noted American artist Chaim Gross (1904-1991). The sculpture depicts two women holding up a wounded man and was meant to honor the sacrifice of Colin Purdie Kelly Jr. (1915-1941), one of the first American heroes of World War II. The sculpture, titled “In Memorium of Captain Colin Kelly,” is made of plaster and wood and was designed as a maquette for a large bronze memorial to the pilot, whose plane was the first American B-17 to be shot down in combat. In 1941, just days after Pearl Harbor, Kelly sacrificed his own life so that his crew could escape their burning plane before it eventually exploded, killing Kelly in the process. “It is an amazing piece of sculpture,” said Geoffrey K. Fleming, HMA’s executive director. “We are very lucky to have acquired it for our collection.”

The story of the sculpture is somewhat mysterious. Not long after its completion, it was exhibited on the rooftop deck of Rockefeller Center in New York City as part of the Sculptors Guild Fourth Annual Outdoor Show, which took place from September 15-October 15, 1942. Following that show, the work disappeared, having never been used to create a permanent memorial to Kelly. At one point it was recorded as being in the possession of well-known New York art dealer Alfredo Valente (1899-1973).

Decades went by before it was rediscovered in 2016 in the garage of Valente’s weekend retreat in Sea Cliff, New York. The Gold family, who acquired the work from Valente’s estate, approached Fleming about the possibility of donating it to the museum. “When it was found, the sculpture had been sitting in a damp environment for many years and needed to be conserved,” stated Fleming, “but we were certain it could be saved and relished the challenge it presented.”

HMA staff picked up the sculpture in April of 2018 and delivered it to the Collector’s Art Group (CAG) conservation studios located in Cincinnati, Ohio. There, it underwent a careful examination and seven-month long conservation and restoration process, which was aided by a period photograph of the sculpture when it was exhibited in 1942.

“The work that needed to be completed was time-consuming, but due to the subject and size of the sculpture, it was necessary to get the work done correctly so the artist’s original intentions could be restored and presented,” said Fleming. The museum staff retrieved the sculpture in October of 2018 and brought it to its new home at HMA, where it was on display in time for the observation of Veterans Day. The sculpture is not currently on display at HMA.

HMA hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday; and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. General admission is free on Tuesdays thanks to the generous sponsorship of Macy’s and $5 per adult on other days. HMA general admission is also free to Museum Members, children younger than 18, veterans and their immediate families, and active duty military and their immediate families. For more information on HMA, visit www.hmoa.org or call (304) 529-2701. HMA is fully accessible.

“In March 2018, we recognized artists and arts organizations from around the Mountain State whose work promotes, supports and grows the arts. Their work makes a difference in schools, on stages, in theaters and museums. The creativity of their work is only surpassed by their dedication to the arts.

It gave us an opportunity to salute the work of these artists and organizations that have served West Virginians for many years and to welcome and encourage others whose work is cutting edge and introducing arts in exciting new ways.

Each of the people and organizations who received an award are making an impact on our state. They join the ranks of those, since these awards were introduced in 1999, whose sincere commitment to the arts make our state a more wonderful place to live.

We salute the winners for their work and thank them, along with the many others in our state who share their talents with West Virginians of all ages, encouraging them to be involved in the arts.”

Governor Jim Justice

Legislative Leadership Awards

Arts in Education

Senator Kenny Mann

As former chair of the Senate Education Committee, Senator Mann takes an active interest in our state’s public education programs and understands that the arts play a vital role in the complete education of our youth. He helped with the placement of musical instruments at Mountain View Elementary and Middle School, Union, through the VH1 Save The Music Foundation program and supports the West Virginia Ambassadors Camp program that offers eighth graders the opportunity to learn about state arts, culture and government.

Delegate Shawn Fluharty

Serving a district that has seen an exciting revitalization of historic properties, Delegate Fluharty supports the arts through his involvement with the Wheeling Symphony Orchestra and West Virginia Independence Hall arts programs.

Cultural Facilities

Senator Michael A. Woelfel

Senator Woelfel appreciates the community and economic value of successful cultural facilities. He supports the programs of the Huntington Museum of Art and the restoration of the Keith-Albee Theatre. He is instrumental in the continuation of the Marshall Artist Series at the Keith Albee.

Delegate George “Boogie” Ambler

Delegate Ambler is an advocate for the arts in his district. He supports the Greenbrier Valley Theatre, which is the West Virginia state professional theatre, and Carnegie Hall. Both facilities are important to the arts from educational and community standpoints.

Senator Ryan J. Ferns

Former Senator Ferns has a strong interest in the arts programs in Ohio County. He appreciates the importance of arts in his community and supports programs in Wheeling such as the Wheeling Symphony Orchestra, Oglebay Institute and the Capitol Theater.
Folk Art

Senator Douglas E. Facemire

Two of the state’s important and well-known folk life programs are in Senator Facemire’s district. The Frank and Jane Gabor Folklife Center at Fairmont State University is home to scholarly research, publications, community programs, events and undergraduate studies. Each June, Glenville comes alive with the West Virginia State Folk Festival.

Delegate Ben Queen

A professional photographer, Delegate Queen brings a keen sense of art to his work. His photography of traditional life, art events and historic reenactments documents the folk arts in the Mountain State in a unique way. His work captures events in which contemporary programs celebrate the past.

Lifetime Achievement

Senator C. Edward Gaunch

Senator Gaunch is an enthusiastic supporter of the arts throughout the Mountain State. He is interested in the arts and arts education programs that provide our residents and our visitors with a better understanding of the state’s diverse arts activities. He is especially active with arts programming in the Kanawha Valley.

Delegate Larry L. Rowe

Dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the historic Malden area, Delegate Rowe supports the arts in his community with his involvement in community programs, festivals and history. He published History Tour of Old Malden: Booker T. Washington’s Formative Years and is a founding member of the Malden Salt Reunion festival, which celebrates traditional arts and businesses.

Mountain Stage

Mountain Stage with Larry Groce has been the home of live music on public radio for more than three decades. Now in its 35th season, Mountain Stage is heard on 240 NPR stations across the country. A radio audience of nearly 200,000 people listen each week to hear established favorites and emerging new artists, all captured in the spontaneous atmosphere of live performance. Mountain Stage’s stylistic offerings go beyond stereotypes about West Virginians and our old-time and bluegrass music. Mountain Stage helps spread a positive image about West Virginia to music lovers and radio listeners across the country.

The diversity of its presentation has served the show well. What started in 1983 as a statewide, West Virginia-based variety program grew to enjoy national distribution in 1986. More than 41,000 listeners subscribe to the Mountain Stage podcast each week. In 2017 nearly 15,000 people experienced a live taping of Mountain Stage, most of which enjoyed that experience right here in the Culture Center Theater. Audience members from 36 states and multiple countries bought tickets and travelled to see a show in West Virginia. Lifelong listeners who come to the Mountain State to be a part of the show that they’ve heard on the radio for so many years create an economic impact of well over a million dollars each year.
With support from the state and partner agencies, underwriters, grants and a long list of supporters, Mountain Stage has been an entertaining and ear-opening resource for music discovery for West Virginians and listeners well beyond the state’s borders. Many popular artists had some of their earliest national exposure on Mountain Stage; acts like The Barenaked Ladies, Lyle Lovett, Norah Jones and Sarah McLachlan appeared on Mountain Stage in the early parts of their careers. Artists like Randy Newman, Mavis Staples, Richard Thompson, Joan Baez and Martina McBride have graced the stage, and Mountain Stage provides a national spotlight for home-grown talent from West Virginia and the Appalachian region.

Kathleen G. Corbett
Kathleen Gardner Corbett is the former director of vocal music at Capital High School in Charleston, WV. Corbett received a bachelor’s degree in music education from The King’s College in New York and a master’s degree plus 60 hours from Marshall University, State University of New York and West Virginia College of Graduate Studies in Charleston. She has helped to produce more than 30 musical productions in West Virginia and New York. Her choirs have ranked in national competitions with Superior Awards and Grand Champions. In 2006, Corbett was awarded The Vocal Music Teacher of the Year Award from the West Virginia Music Educators Association (WVMEA). She has served as president of the WVMEA, president of the West Virginia Vocal Music Association, chairperson for the West Virginia State Show Choir Festival, the Kanawha County Choral Music Festival, the West Virginia All State Chorus, and past officer for state and county vocal music associations.

Huntington Museum of Art
For more than six decades, the Huntington Museum of Art has been defined by a vision of bringing the world of art to the people of West Virginia and the Tri-State region. That vision, nurtured by the generosity of museum founders and supporters, has led to the creation of a truly distinguished fine art museum, the largest between Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Richmond. It boasts an exceptional collection, innovative exhibitions and educational programs, a landmark facility, and an extraordinary 52-acre site where art and nature blend in harmony. The museum serves as a point of growing pride for the state and the region — a dynamic cultural center where art and nature educate and inspire visitors and residents alike.

Arts Patron

Top of West Virginia Convention and Visitors Bureau

The Top of West Virginia Convention and Visitors Bureau is a joint project of Brooke and Hancock counties and the City of Weirton, dedicated to promoting tourism in the “top of West Virginia.” An independent non-profit organization governed by a volunteer Board of Directors, it advertises local communities as a destination to the recreation, business meeting and convention markets, and has excelled in promoting the arts to increase tourism, cultural awareness and community engagement. In 2008, the Hancock County Arts Council became a division of Top of WV, and the creation of two major development projects, the Weirton Event Center and the Summit Art Gallery, has brought 20,000 tourists to the area annually.

Leadership in The Arts

Donald J. Laney

Donald Laney graduated from the University of California-Irvine, with an MFA in dance. He is the producing artistic director of the West Virginia Dance Company, the only professional touring dance company in West Virginia. Before entering the graduate program at UCI, Laney performed with the West Virginia Dance Company, Houlihan & Dancers (Miami, FL), Randy James Dance Works (NYC), X-Factor (NC) and Trillium Performing Arts Collective (WV). Since 2005, he has served as the West Virginia Governor’s School for the Arts instructor in dance. In addition to performing, Laney is a freelance artist, offering teaching, choreography, costume design and set construction services. His choreography has been a staple of the West Virginia Dance Company’s repertoire for ten years. He has created original modern dance pieces for the West Virginia Dance Company, James Madison University, Marshall University, West Virginia Wesleyan College, Charleston Ballet and high schools throughout West Virginia. In 2008, Laney was granted permission to perform Daniel Nagrin’s 1948 masterpiece “Spanish Dance,” an opportunity that few dancers have had.

Susan S. Landis Distinguished Service to the Arts

Renée K. Nicholson

A classically trained dancer turned creative writer, Renée K. Nicholson has dramatically changed the face of healthcare in West Virginia through her work in narrative medicine. After her career in performing was cut short by the onset of rheumatoid arthritis, Nicholson obtained an MFA in Creative Writing from West Virginia University, where she won the Rebecca Mason Perry Award for Outstanding First-Year MFA Student and the Russ MacDonald Prize for Graduate Writing, Fiction. Her work writing with a terminal patient about his life experiences motivated Nicholson to take workshops and eventually earn a certificate in narrative medicine at Columbia University. She discovered that expressive writing not only has therapeutic benefits for patients but has been shown to reduce physical pain. In 2016, Nicholson received grant funding to launch the first narrative medicine research project ever conducted with rural cancer patients and the first of its kind in Appalachia. Her program has become very popular and in less than a year is on pace to reach her two-year goal of 40 patients treated.

The Old Brick Playhouse

In the past 26 years since it was established, The Old Brick Playhouse has offered educational arts programming locally, throughout the Mid-Atlantic region and overseas. It offers afterschool programs that provide a safe and positive environment for elementary and secondary school students to explore the arts. In addition to local afterschool programming, The Old Brick Playhouse Touring Company creates an original play that is performed annually at elementary schools throughout the state and which focuses on social and cultural tolerance, conflict resolution, and drug and anti-bullying strategies. These shows have been performed at the National Theatre in Washington, D.C., the Edinburg Festival Fringe, and thousands of elementary schools in the Mid-Atlantic region and overseas. In 2009, The Old Brick Playhouse received the Coming Up Taller Award from the President’s Committee on the Arts and the Humanities, recognizing it as one of the top arts educational programs in the country.

Sophie Fatu performed during the awards ceremony. The 5-year-old is a child jazz singer and performer who sang a viral cover version of Frank Sinatra’s “My Way” in late 2017.
Organization of the Year
Charleston Light Opera Guild

Founded in 1949 by area vocal teachers and relocated former professional singer and actor Leonard Stocker, the Charleston Light Opera Guild is a community theatre that strives to present quality classic, new and cutting-edge musical theatre to area audiences at affordable prices while providing an outlet for nurturing the talents of singers, actors, dancers, musicians and behind-the-scenes civic volunteers. The Guild has presented 225 productions of more than 130 musicals. More than 14,000 people see a Guild production each year. The Guild credits many professionals in theatre, dance, music and production among its alumni, including Jennifer Garner, Kathy Mattea, Ann Magnuson and Joe Chrest. The Guild has received the Mayor’s Award for the Arts, the 2016 Arts to the Max Award from Charleston Area Alliance and an award for Excellence in Support of the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts Organization Leadership Recognition, presented at the 2016 Governor’s Arts Awards.

Artist of the Year
Peggy McKowen

Growing up in New Martinsville, Peggy McKowen’s theatrical career began at four years old. After receiving a Master of Fine Arts from the University of Texas-Austin, McKowen worked around the United States and internationally designing costumes and sets. Her international work includes design work in Brazil, Germany, Scotland, Italy and China. She taught theater and humanities at several colleges, including Shepherd University and Dickinson College, as well as West Virginia University, where she was chair of the theater department for five years. In 2008, McKowen became the Contemporary American Theater Festival’s associate producing director, where she continues to design costumes and sets. Her work has been critically acclaimed in national publications, including American Theatre, The New York Times and the Wall Street Journal. She played a large part in the creation of Shepherd University’s Contemporary Theater Studies major, which launched in the fall of 2017. McKowen’s artistic accomplishments have impacted the Eastern Panhandle, the state of West Virginia and the Mid-Atlantic Region, national and international communities.

Special performances included the Capital High School VIPs; Sophie Fatu, five-year-old jazz singer and performer; and former Miss West Virginia Kari Safford Blankenship.
Last winter I was honored to be awarded a FY 2018 Professional Development grant from the West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History and the West Virginia Commission on the Arts to attend and participate in the College Art Association (CAA) Conference. This association is the largest national organization dedicated to people committed to the practice of art, teaching and research about the visual arts. As the most well-attended international forum in the visual arts, the conference gets well over half of its 12,000 artist, historian, scholar, curator, critic, collector, educator, publisher, and other professional members in attendance.

The conference offered more than 200 presentations, panel discussions, workshops, special events and exhibitions. It was not the first time I was able to attend (thanks to grants in graduate school) but the first time in Los Angeles, and the first time as an official member of the Association’s Committee on Women in the Arts. I also was able to present about my research on collaboration between GLAM (galleries, libraries, archives and museums) to this broad, worldly audience.

This was a tremendous opportunity to help benefit my work and broaden my perspective. Since I am currently the exhibits coordinator for West Virginia University Libraries, I curate exhibitions featuring regional artists with a special focus on West Virginia themes or artists. I also research and write articles about curating in the most accessible way for the broadest audience possible, as well as feminist and women artists.

First, I met with the National Committee on Women in the Arts, a part of the CAA to which I was recently appointed. They do wonderful things for female artists, including the presentation of the annual Distinguished Feminist Awards. In 2018, the winners of these awards were Lynn Hershman Leeson (visual artist) and Lowery Stokes Sims (scholar).

It was exciting to meet with this awesome group of women from around the nation working in art, art history, curating, while always keeping in mind women’s and feminist concerns in the arts. I’m excited to help the committee by contributing to the CWA picks of the best in feminist art exhibits on a monthly basis.

I was also able to present my research on the strategies and benefits of libraries as art venues, pointing to their broad audiences and fostering of new ideas as we move into the future of more digitized books. I attended several informative and inspiring sessions, my favorites including an interview between Helen Molesworth and Catherine Opie, a conversation on preserving women artists’ legacy, a panel on eco-materialism with Linda Weintraub and a panel on visual and material culture of women’s marches.

I saw exhibits in several galleries. Among my favorites were The Hive, which had a super fun and amazing stitching exhibit, and Gloria Delson Contemporary Arts, which featured a provocative and intimate sculpture and photography exhibit by Brazilian artist Melissa Meier.

I visited The Broad and saw their amazing collection of Modern art, including stellar work by Sherry Levine, Kara Walker, Jenny Holzer, Barbara Kruger and more. And I checked out the Los Angeles Museum of Contemporary Art, with a similarly traditional white-walled curatorial approach and majority male artists, but I was happy to see the art by women including the Lynda Benglis floor piece, mixing it up.

I took a tour of the Los Angeles Public Library artwork, which was super exciting to me because I work in a library and promote artwork in that venue. Of particular interest to me were some huge sculpture installations by Therman Statom and a ceiling mural by Renee Petropoulos entitled Seven Centers. The latter, a guide explained to me, was meant to challenge all of the white-centric murals painted originally throughout the building. To a similar effect, Visualizing Language: Oaxaca in L.A. illuminates the diversity of L.A.’s history, culture and identity by offering a fresh narrative that focuses on the indigenous Zapotec cultures of Oaxacan communities. The exhibition is anchored by a series of eight larger-than-life murals by the Oaxacan artist collective Tlacolulokos in the Central Library’s Rotunda. Placed in juxtaposition with the existing 1933 Dean Cornwell murals, they tell a more traditional history of California’s colonization. I just loved these murals so much. The mixture of the old and new is fabulous, honoring in such a huge space visual language and challenging histories and perspectives.

I absolutely use my gained knowledge directly in my practice as exhibits coordinator for WVU Libraries, as well as my writing and my own artwork. Seeing new exhibits opens my mind, and meeting new people and hearing different perspectives impacts me and my work. Thanks again to the WV Commission on the Arts for helping make this trip happen.

Jordyn Marshall was named West Virginia’s 2018 Poetry Out Loud champion at the state finals event held at the Culture Center. Marshall, a Capital High School senior, represented West Virginia at the national Poetry Out Loud competition on April 24 and 25 in Washington, D.C.

Poetry Out Loud is a national competition in which high school students memorize and perform classical and contemporary poetry, beginning at the school level with students participating in classroom and school-wide contests. The winners of those competitions advance to the state finals.

In 2017-18, 45 West Virginia high schools held Poetry Out Loud contests with over 4,500 students participating.

As state champion, Jordyn Marshall received $200 and a trip to the national finals, as well as $500 for Capital High School for the purchase of poetry books and materials. Marshall won the state title with her performances of “I Sit and Sew” by Alice Moore Dunbar-Nelson; “Hip-Hop Ghazal” by Patricia Smith; and “On Monsieur’s Departure” by Queen Elizabeth I.

Abbey Delk of Wheeling Park High School was named the state’s runner-up. Delk received $100, as well as $200 for her school. Caleb Hanna of Richwood High School, Sarah Marzouk of George Washington High School and Makayla Tyree of Nitro High School were also among the top five state finalists.

The West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History and the West Virginia Commission on the Arts commissioned Gilmer County artist Matt Thomas to create the Poetry Out Loud State Champion trophy and a
A companion award to be displayed at the winning school.

Students and teachers participating in the two-day state finals event received a variety of works created by West Virginia artists. Handmade letterpress posters were provided by Emily Sokolosky of Base Camp Printing Company in Charleston. Matt Thomas of ThomasWork created handmade journals with Appalachian hardwood covers. Participants also received a copy of Whipstitches, a poetry collection by Wood County artist Randi Ward.

The state finals featured a performance by Marc Harshman and Doug Van Gundy, who joined forces to present Running With Whiskey: Words and Music From Appalachia, a unique program of storytelling, music and poetry. Harshman, a nationally acclaimed children's book author and storyteller, is the state's poet laureate.

Below: The top five finalists: Makayla Tyree, Nitro High school; Sarah Marzouk, George Washington High School; Jordyn Marshall, Capital High School; Caleb Hanna, Richwood High School; Abby Delk, Wheeling Park High School.
Van Gundy is a champion fiddler, an accomplished poet, and a professor at West Virginia Wesleyan College.

Storyteller, author and recording artist Bil Lepp served as the master of ceremonies and was the featured performer during a reception held at Taylor Books in Charleston. Additional presenters included poet Randi Ward and 2017 Poetry Out Loud state champion Tyler Ray.

Partnering with the National Endowment for the Arts and the Poetry Foundation, the West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History sponsors Poetry Out Loud to encourage young people to learn about great poetry and explore their literary heritage while mastering public speaking skills and building self-confidence. By incorporating the work of West Virginia artisans and performing artists in the program, the department seeks to nurture in each student a life-long appreciation for the arts.

New Opportunities for Artists

Berkeley Arts Council Artist Census

The Berkeley Arts Council (BAC) is conducting a census of artists in the Eastern West Virginia Region. BAC seeks responses from artists and artisans in the eight eastern counties: Berkeley, Grant, Hampshire, Hardy, Jefferson, Mineral, Morgan and Pendleton.

BAC seeks to develop comprehensive data on artists and artisans working in all disciplines that can be compiled to support arts advocacy by BAC and other organizations at the local, county and state level. BAC will not share your personal details outside of the Berkeley Arts Council.

The survey can be accessed on the BAC web site at https://berkeleyartswv.org/artist-survey/.

The Berkeley Arts Council is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization incorporated in West Virginia working to ensure that Berkeley County has a vibrant, vital arts environment by promoting awareness, understanding and appreciation of the literary, visual and performing arts in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia. Visit the Berkeley Arts Council website at www.berkeleyartswv.org.

Residencies for Writers

The Anderson Center for Interdisciplinary Studies offers monthlong residencies from May-October to poets, fiction writers, creative nonfiction writers and translators at Tower View, a 350-acre historic estate in Red Wing, Minnesota. Residents receive lodging, meals and studio space. Submit 10 pages of poetry or prose; a résumé, curriculum vitae or biographical statement; a work plan; and a $20 application fee by February 15. Visit www.andersoncenter.org for online application and complete guidelines.

Art Farm offers residencies of one week to five months from June 1 to November 1 to poets, fiction writers and creative nonfiction writers on a working farm in Marquette, Nebraska. Residents are provided with a private room and work space. Families and collaborators are also welcome. Each resident is asked to contribute 12 hours of work on the farm per week. Submit up to 10 poems or a short story, a novel chapter or up to three essays of any length; a curriculum vitae; and contact information for three references with a $20 application fee by March 1. Visit www.artfarmnebraska.org for more information.

Mid-Atlantic Arts Foundation
USAartists International

USArtists International supports performances by U.S. artists at important cultural festivals and arts marketplaces around the globe. Committed to the presence of U.S. based artists on world stages, USArtists International provides grants to ensembles and individual performers in dance, music and theatre invited to perform at significant international festivals and performing arts markets.

USAI encourages and promotes the vibrant diversity of U.S. artists and creative expression in the performing arts by expanding opportunity and exposure to international audiences, encouraging international cultural exchange and enhancing the creative and professional development of U.S. based artists by providing connections with presenters, curators and artists around the world. USAI extends the reach and impact of professional touring artists and ensembles from the United States and is committed to expanded touring opportunities for continued sustainability of U.S. artists.

USAI provides grants of up to $15,000 towards support of artist fees, travel, accommodations, per diem, shipping and visa preparation.

For more information, visit www.midatlanticarts.org.

Peer Assistant Networks (PAN)

The West Virginia Commission on the Arts (WVCA) makes two PAN sessions per year available to arts organizations free of charge. A session can last up to two days and range anywhere from computer training to organizational development, to marketing and conflict resolution, to lighting design and festival and season planning. They can involve an organization’s whole board of directors or one or two staff members. The WVCA has a designated group of peer advisors from which organizations may choose. These advisors all have experience in the arts community in West Virginia and expertise in a range of fields that the WVCA believes can provide the best, most relevant and applicable set of skills to arts organizations in the state. These advisors are listed in a catalog available from the commission.

For more information about the Peer Assistance Network, contact Barbie Smoot at Barbie.J.Smoot@wv.gov or by calling (304) 558-0240.
Submit to ArtWorks!

Does your arts organization deserve to be in the spotlight? Are you an artist who attended a great conference or workshop and feel like you must share your experience? Do you have an idea that you believe would make a great story? Whatever it is, email it to elizabeth.a.yeager@wv.gov with the subject “ArtWorks Submission” and your idea could be published in an upcoming issue of ArtWorks. Please submit all ideas by May 15.

Need More Copies?

ArtWorks is looking to expand its distribution list. We would love to send multiple copies of the publication to organizations around the state to be shared with visitors. If you or an organization you work with is interested in helping us spread the news about the arts and the state’s arts grant programs in West Virginia, let us know. As a trial, we will send ten copies to you; if you would like to have more, you can always let us know. Please contact Jack O’Hearn at jack.j.ohearn@wv.gov if interested.

NASAA Welcomes 2019 Board Members

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Assembly of State Arts Agencies (NASAA) announced the election of three new members to its board of directors. As part of a rigorous national nomination process, state arts agencies elected these exemplary leaders at the NASAA Assembly 2018 conference in Baltimore, Maryland. Each will serve a three-year term.

Eduardo Arosemena-Muñoz, chair, Institute of Puerto Rican Culture
Born in Guayaquil, Ecuador, Eduardo Arosemena-Muñoz is Puerto Rico’s assistant secretary of state for foreign relations & government affairs.
Board term: 2019-2021

Carla Du Pree, council member, Maryland State Arts Council
Carla Du Pree is a literary artist, a state arts ambassador and the executive director of CityLit Project, a literary nonprofit that nurtures readers and writers throughout the region.
Board term: 2019-2021

Michael Faison, Executive Director, Idaho Commission on the Arts
In addition to his role as executive director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts, Michael Faison is a member of the board of directors of the Western States Arts Federation.
Board term: 2019-2021

In addition to these new directors, four NASAA board members were elected to second three-year terms:

Monica Guzman, former chair, Guam Council on the Arts & Humanities Agency
Karen Paty, executive director, Georgia Council for the Arts
Omari Rush, chair, Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs
John Strickland, chair, West Virginia Commission on the Arts.

“We are delighted to welcome Eduardo, Carla and Michael to the NASAA board, and are pleased that Monica, Karen, Omari and John will continue their service,” said NASAA President and CEO Pam Breaux. “These experienced leaders bring with them keen policy acumen, dedication to serving the public and a genuine passion for the arts. We are excited to work with this new team, and we welcome their expertise and guidance.”

“The 2019 NASAA board continues to represent an exceptionally strong and committed membership,” said NASAA Chair Benjamin Brown. “I am excited to work with these outstanding leaders as we implement NASAA’s new strategic plan and reinforce our dedication to member services and support.”

Per NASAA’s bylaws, the board elected these officers:
1st Vice Chair: Suzanne Wise, executive director, Nebraska Arts Council
2nd Vice Chair: Stephanie Conner, former chair, Tennessee Arts Commission.
