GOLDEN HORSESHOE

From the Editor: ______

History Day 2004 was a great day, as always, especially the annual announcement of History Hero honorees. However, attendance by both individuals and groups was down this year. We missed seeing many people and organizations who usually participate, but who for various reasons did not make it to Charleston on January 29. You will notice that History Day 2005, scheduled for March 17 next year, is already included in our Calendar of Events. We strongly urge all interested organizations to include registration reminders and preparation plans in their agendas for fall meetings. Perhaps you can assign a specific person to be on the lookout for registration information and to be responsible for taking all the necessary steps for your group to be registered on time. We suggest forming a committee well ahead of time to study potential History Hero nominees from your area and to complete the nomination process accurately and on time. In turn, we will continue to include reminders in Archives and History News, and will supply contact information when available.

GOLDEN HORSESHOE

by Joe Geiger

Since 1931, more than 15,000 West Virginia students have received the Golden Horseshoe Award in recognition of their knowledge of West Virginia history. Each year thousands of eighth graders across the State take the Golden Horseshoe examination, and 221 students are inducted into the prestigious Golden Horseshoe Society.

The Golden Horseshoe program began in 1929 when noted historian Phil Conley proposed the creation of West Virginia Clubs, designed to promote appreciation of the Mountain State. He presented his idea to state school superintendent William C. Cook, who believed that students “should learn more about the State, since they are our future citizens and should be fully prepared for citizenship. They should have a knowledge of the past and present status of the State in order to estimate its future possibilities.” The ideas of the two gentlemen developed into the Golden Horseshoe program, the longest running program of its kind in the United States. In 1931 the first Golden Horseshoe test was given, resulting in the awarding of pins to 87 students from 46 counties. These scholars were dubbed Knights and Ladies of the Golden Horseshoe.

A Golden Horseshoe searchable database has been added to the West Virginia Memory Project section of the West Virginia Archives and History Web site, accessible at http://wvmemory.wvculture.org/goldenhorseshoe.html. Most names of Golden Horseshoe winners included in the database were extracted from Golden Horseshoe awards programs from 1931 through 2003. A few additional names were found in the state superintendent’s reports. No program could be found for 1941, but African-American winners for that year were listed in the Report of the State Superintendent of Free Schools. No programs for the years 1943 to 1946 were found, but names were provided by the State Department of Education. Because the information was taken directly from the programs, there may be errors in spelling. If you are unsuccessful in locating a name, you may try searching by county or by year. Corrections may be submitted to Joe Geiger, joe.geiger@wvculture.org.

MORE ON “BENONI”

The December 2003 issue of Archives and History News included a brief article by Carl Hommel originally published in RootsWeb Review, October 1, 2003, on the given name of Benoni with added comments by me, the News editor. Benoni is a Biblical name meaning “son of my sorrow,” given by the dying Rachel to her newborn son, who was later called Benjamin (Genesis 35:18). Mr. Hommel said “the name was often given in American Colonial times to a child whose mother died in childbirth or whose father died before the child was born.” I asked if anyone had a Benoni in their family tree that could be connected with a death or other sorrow to let us know.

Jim Peluso, a native of Fairmont now living in Richmond, Virginia, e-mailed that “one of the older, nicer residential streets in Fairmont is called Benoni Avenue.” He recalled that the street was named for a Benoni Fleming, who he thought may have been the wife of one of Fairmont’s early citizens. I did a little research in Marion County history and found that three Fleming brothers named Nathan, Boaz and Benoni were early settlers and prominent citizens in the area. According to an article on the Fleming Family from A History of Marion County, West Virginia, page 154, published by the Marion County Historical Society in 1985, the three were sons of William and Jane Fleming. Benoni was the last child of this couple, born February 17, 1768. His mother, Jane, died March 7, 1768, less than three weeks after giving birth. I think we now have an example of the use of the name Benoni as outlined in the original article.

Just for the record, I can not state as a fact that Benoni Avenue in Fairmont is named after Mr. Benoni Fleming, but I did not find anyone else, male or female, named Benoni Fleming when I skimmed through a few Marion County census records. I’d love to hear from anyone in the Fleming family or from Marion County historians who can enlighten us further.

FRONTIER FORTS IN WEST VIRGINIA

NOW AVAILABLE FROM SHPO

The West Virginia State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) has published Frontier Forts in West Virginia: Historical and Archaeological Explorations. The guide explores the history, nature and function of 18th-century forts as a defensive system which helped promote the European westward movement into present West Virginia. The guide describes various military engagements, explains the frontier defensive system and the role forts played in that system, and summarizes archaeological attempts to rediscover and examine fort locations throughout the state.

The publication has already been distributed to schools, libraries, historical and genealogical societies and archaeologists. For additional information or to obtain a copy, contact:
