TIPS FOR USING THE ARCHIVES AND HISTORY LIBRARY

From the Editor:

Whether you prefer to pick up gifts in person or order by mail, consider giving West Virginia History as a holiday gift. The new 1999-2000 issue and assorted back issues (some on sale!) are available. Mining Your History Foundation offers fifteen-generation genealogy charts for $2.00 each which would be great stocking stuffers for the genealogist in the family! If you are the family historian, consider filling out a chart as much as you can and presenting the younger generation of your family with the gift of their own heritage. If you are able to visit us at the Cultural Center in Charleston, don’t forget to take advantage of our expanded hours, particularly in the evening.

USING THE ARCHIVES AND HISTORY LIBRARY

By Susan Scouras

Whether you use the Archives and History Library in person, or explore our indexes and services available on-line through www.wvculture.org, we will provide some tips and information to guide you in making the best use of your time and in locating information you may not find on your own. The goal of the Archives and History Library staff is to make the many components of the collection available to our patrons, and to direct Library users to the sources and services they need.

The West Virginia Union Catalog

First, let’s take a look at the West Virginia Union Catalog, searchable on the Internet through computers in the Archives and History Library Reading Room, through computer connections in most West Virginia libraries, or from any computer with Internet access. To search from home or from a library which does not belong to the Union Catalog, use the featured link on our Web site at www.wvculture.org/history, or type in http://129.71.160.3/vtls40/frame. The catalog can be searched by author, title, subject and keyword. If a title is held by the Archives and History Library (coded as WVCA) or by the West Virginia State Library Commission Library (coded as WVLC), the holdings will appear in boxes at the bottom of the screen when the search is conducted from either of the two libraries or on the Internet link. In any other library across the state, that particular library’s holdings will be identified in the same way. If the title is held by another library, click on “Locations” to see the codes for the library or libraries that have that... book in their collections. An alphabetical list of the library codes is on the lefthand portion of the Web page. By clicking on a library code, you will find the name, address, phone number and often links to that library’s Web site. You will have all the information you need to contact the library yourself, or to have your local library request an inter-library loan for you. Please be advised that the Archives and History Library generally does not inter-library loan materials from its collection.

Whenever materials are not available through inter-library loan, ask if the library has research services available by mail or e-mail. If you are unable to visit the library in question, and if the library does not offer research services, you may want to request a copy of the Archives and History Library Researchers List. Many of the professional researchers who have requested to be placed on our list for distribution to the public are willing to travel to do research.

The Archives and History Library does not endorse anyone as a researcher. As a service to those who are unable to visit the Archives and History Library in person or who require more extensive work than we are able to complete in response to a typical research request letter, we provide names and addresses of researchers who have notified us that they are available to research for a fee only. If you have a problem with any individual or group on our Researchers list, please contact us.

We also suggest you write or e-mail the genealogical/historical society in the area in which the library is located and ask if anyone in the group does research for others. Remember to include your telephone number and e-mail address when you write in case there are questions. The local library should be able to provide information on area groups. If not, you can request our list of West Virginia Historical, Genealogical and Preservation Societies, or check our Web site under “Historical Societies and Repositories,” as listed by county in the “Archives” section (http://www.wvculture.org/history/guide2.html).

Subject searches can be tricky if you are not familiar with library subject heading rules and practices. For information on an individual person, type in the last name first. To look for titles about a family, type in “Smith family.” Usually alternate spellings will have cross-references, but not always. Be sure to search for variations in spelling of surnames, such as “Lock,” “Loch,” “Lach,” and “Locke” family. For a West Virginia county, type in the name of the county. Most information related to a county will have some type of subject heading beginning with the county name. Two types of records in particular can also be found by searching the type of record, followed by the state name, then the county name. Example: “Registers of Births, etc.-West Virginia-Kanawha County,” and “Cemeteries-West Virginia-Kanawha County.” (Note: do not type in the quotation marks and hyphens in the examples given, just type in the words with a space between words.)

To search by title, omit “A,” “An” or “The” if that is the first word in the title. The cataloging system ignores those works if the title was entered properly, and will not find the title if “The,” etc., is typed in as the first word. For example, to locate “The Harper Family” family history book, type in “Harper Family” as the title. If the title of the book is “A History of the Allerton Family,” type in “History of the Allerton Family.”

When searching for a specific author, type in the surname, then the first name or initial. Variations in an author’s name may or may not be cross-referenced. If you are searching for works by Stan Cohen, you will find some of them under “Cohen, Stan,” “Cohen, Stan B.” and “Cohen, Stanley B.” Be sure to check all variables to find all works by a single author.

Keyword searches will bring up the word or words entered if they appear anywhere in the entry, whether in the title, subtitle, subject headings, or cataloging notes. A Boolean search that allows you to better define a search is also possible. If you are a patient and persistent (or desperate!) researcher, a keyword or Boolean search may pay... off, particularly if the original cataloger of the title was not genealogy-oriented. For instance, buried in the 1,325 hits brought up in a keyword search for the name “Barker” was a work titled The Joseph Barker, Jr. Home, a report prepared by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that would be very interesting to a Barker family researcher. Neither “Barker family” nor “Barker, Joseph” was listed as a subject heading, until I came across the entry and added “Barker family” to the catalog entry. (In addition to editing the newsletter, my duties include cataloging newly received materials and making corrections to the VTLS West Virginia Union Catalog as needed.) A subject search under “Barker” would not have found this report.

A keyword search could turn up family names used as middle names or maiden names used with married surnames that were not added to the catalog as subject headings. The only subject heading for the title Some Descendants of James and Sarah (Ravenscroft) Jones was “Jones family.” A keyword search for “Ravenscroft” would have located this title even though “Ravenscroft family” was not a subject heading in the catalog. The subtitle of this book is “including separate sections of the connecting families of Ravenscroft, Collins, Hickman, Richards and Cain.” When I came across the entry, I added all of these names as subjects, but I will never be able to find all such situations, and in the case of books covering more than five or six surnames, I would not be able to add all of them as subjects in most instances. Again, with patience and persistence, you may be able to locate valuable information using a keyword or Boolean search that you would not find otherwise.

Library Reading Room

If you are a patron of the Archives and History Library Reading Room, also referred to as the Search Room, here are a few guidelines to organization and use of materials found in the Reading Room itself:

- Not all of the collection is housed in the Reading Room. Always check the catalog to locate all materials in the collection. For example, pamphlets are in the Closed Stacks and are available upon presenting a call slip to the staff member at the Reference Desk. Most Closed Stack titles will be indicated in the Union Catalog as “Third Floor.” Clipping files, materials that require special handling, the Manuscript Collection, back issues of Periodicals, State Documents, and many other materials are also in Closed Stacks. Moving images, photographs and other Special Collections are housed elsewhere and are available by arrangement with the archivists on staff.

- Any time you do not find what you need in the Library Reading Room, ask the staff for assistance. Anyone working at either Library desk is there to help patrons. Staff working in the Reading Room, but not on duty, will also be happy to assist you or to direct you to the person who can take care of you.

- The actual paper card catalog has been retained in the Reading Room, but has not been updated with new cards since the VTLS computerized catalog (West Virginia Union Catalog) came into use around 1991. The staff is still in the process of adding less used titles in the paper card catalog to the computer catalog, so some titles in the Dewey ranges of 001 through the 800′s, as well as fiction titles, may not be in the Union Catalog, but are still recorded in the card file. No materials received since 1991, regardless of the actual publication date of the titles, have been added to the paper card catalog. If you need assistance using the computerized catalog, the staff will be happy to help you.

- Holdings in the Surname File are listed in a notebook on the encyclopedia stand near the windows. These file folders of material relating to specific surnames are in Closed Stacks and available on request.
• The Genealogy Surname Exchange list of researchers for specific surnames is available on our Web site and is also in a notebook on the encyclopedia stand.

• Maps are in Closed Stacks and available on request. Most are listed in the Union Catalog under title and subject headings. Look for maps under the state, county or city name. We also have a card file for the Map Collection through 1991.

• Family history books are shelved in Dewey Decimal System number 929.2, with an alpha-numeric code added according to the main surname included in the volume. Be sure to check the catalog for the surname you are researching—do not just look at what is on the shelves. “The History of the Smith Family” may well include enough Joneses and Millers to have those names as subject headings as well. If you only look at the Jones family books on the shelves, you possibly will miss other works that include that surname.

• County records are cataloged under Dewey number 929.3, alphabetically by county name. Virginia and West Virginia counties are intermingled. County records for other states are in the same general area.

• County records transcribed under the auspices of the Historic Markers Commission of the Works Projects Administration in the 1930's are shelved under Dewey number 929.2 H62. These are the numbered volumes bound in blue found in the middle of the West Virginia/Virginia county record books. While useful for those patrons who do not care to use microfilm, these transcriptions contain many errors and omissions. We recommend viewing the actual records on microfilm. Also, these transcriptions are not indexed, as a rule, while many counties have indexes in their record books, or have compiled separate indexes available in our Library on microfilm. If you have never used microfilm before, our staff will teach you how to use the microfilm readers.

• Cemetery record books are cataloged under Dewey number 929.5, alphabetically by county name. Again, Virginia and West Virginia counties are intermingled.

• Books about the Civil War are under Dewey number 973.7.

• West Virginia state history books are cataloged under Dewey number 975.4.

• West Virginia county history books are cataloged under Dewey number 975.4 plus the Dewey-assigned geographic regional number for each county. For example, Kanawha County history is found under 975.437, Wood County is under 975.422, and Boone County is under 975.439. A map of West Virginia Counties with an alphabetical list of the counties and their assigned Dewey numbers is posted in the Library Reading Room to assist patrons in locating county Dewey numbers.

• Books used very frequently by the Library staff will be housed in Ready Reference, shelved immediately behind the Reading Room Reference Desk, and indicated by “RR” in the Catalog. Reference books are also shelved on the same wall, following the “RR” section, and are indicated in the catalog by “R.”

• Immigration and passenger list books are found on the Reference shelves, in the R 325's.

• The most recent copies of newspapers and other periodicals are housed in the Reading Room. Back issues are either in Closed Stacks or available on microfilm. Ask the staff for assistance.

• If you know a place name, but do not know the county in which it is located, check the gazetteers and place name books located in the RR 917's.

• Atlases and maps, including historical maps showing boundary changes over the years, are found on the Atlas Stand by the Reading Room windows.

- Return books and all other materials to the Book Return cart kept by the Reference Desk. Please do not re-shelve books.

Copies

- Photocopy service is available (through the staff only) for $.25 per page for 8 ½" x 11" and 8 ½" x 14" copies. 11" x 17" copies are $.50 per page. Our staff will put two book pages on one copy page whenever possible. Please do not save your order until you are ready to leave. Instead, fill out a copy order form and bring your books for copying as you locate your information. We will make the copies as soon as we can and hold them for you until you are ready for them. Payment is made when you pick up the completed copies.

- Microfilm copy service is also available for $.50 per page copied by a staff member, or for $.25 per page copied on our self-service microfilm copiers. 11" x 17" microfilm copies are available. We keep change for the coin-operated machines and will show you how to use the copiers.

- For payment of copy orders or materials on sale through the Library, we accept personal checks, but we are not able to accept credit cards. We keep as much change as is feasible, but we ask that you try to bring small bills with you, especially evenings, Saturdays and holidays.

Microfilm Rooms

The Microfilm Reading Room is accessible only through the Library Reading Room. Here are some guidelines for using the microfilm collection:

- Please sign for use of a microfilm reader at the Reference Desk. Each reader is numbered, with a corresponding number on the sign-up sheet. Several types of readers are available. The staff will be happy to show you how to use any of the machines.

- The Microfilm Storage Room opens off the Microfilm Reader Room and houses the majority of our microfilm collection. County records, daily and weekly newspapers, Vital Statistics indexes, as well as Census records and Soundex rolls, are in labeled drawers.

- Users themselves may remove up to three rolls of film at a time from the drawers. After use, we ask that film be rewound, replaced in the box, and left on top of the film cabinets. Please do not re-shelve microfilm. Please notify the staff of microfilm or reels in need of repair. We do not charge patrons for accidental damage to microfilm.

- Military records and indexes on microfilm are housed in the cabinets in the hallway between the Reading Room and the Microfilm Reading Room, and in several drawers in the Microfilm Storage Room.

- Ask the staff for assistance in locating any records you do not find readily. Some microfilm, such as copies of dissertations, are kept in Closed Stacks. You will find these titles listed in the catalog and indicated as “Micro-4th Floor.” This microfilm is available on request.

Library Staff is Here to Help

The main thing to remember is that the Archives and History Library staff is here to help you. If you can not locate the information you need, ask the staff. If the staff member does not know the answer to your question, he or she will find someone who does. We want to make the West Virginia Archives and History collection accessible for all.

1890 Census Supplement Project

The World Genealogy Project, accessible at http://www.worldgenealogyproject.bigstep.com, has announced that all of the information provided to date for the 1890 Census Supplement Project has been put on-line for free viewing. The intent of the project is to collect family household data circa 1890 using submissions by genealogists and researchers in order to recreate the information that would have been provided in an 1890 Census. Currently over 6,800 households have been identified for the data base. The Web site list can be searched by surname. A corresponding book is offered for sale on the Web site. The book contains lists of surname by state, maiden names when known, and married women by first name when maiden name is unknown. While the on-line household entries do not provide the name of the submitting researcher, the book lists contributors along with the family numbers for the information they supplied. As always, we advise caution when using information from secondary sources. Lists such as this one can help a researcher bridge a gap, but should be documented as much as possible with primary sources such as birth, death and marriage records, etc. Whenever possible, contact the contributor and ask for documentation.

DONATIONS

Thank you to Shirley Parsons, Charleston, for the donation of new and used West Virginia history and literature books. When shopping yard sales and used book sales, Ms. Parsons always keeps her eyes open for possible donations to the Archives and History Library. We appreciate her efforts very much. Pat Pleska donated the volumes of Gallia County, Ohio, records listed in the New Title List this month. We try to collect a few non-West Virginia records for border state counties.

Article from the January 18, 1911
Charleston Daily Mail

“During the session of the State legislature the department of Archives and History will be open from 8 o’clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon, and from 7 until 10 o’clock at night. The rule requiring the department to remain open during the evening hours applies only to the time the legislature is in session, and the hours are fixed so as to accommodate the members of the legislature, their relatives and friends, visitors in the city and the public, generally. State Archivist and Historian Virgil Lewis accords all a hearty invitation to visit the department at this time. Especially is a visit during the evening hours of interest. The rooms are brilliantly lighted by electricity, are comfortably warmed, and the many interesting displays present a doubly interesting appearance at night. The department of Archives and History is located in the Capitol Annex and it is by far the most interesting department to the visitor in the city.”

[Editor’s note: Not only are the Library and the State Museum regularly open weekday evenings now, the antique display case recently placed in the Archives Library Reading Room is from the original Archives facility described here.]
