Mill:
Mr. & Mrs. Jack Merical
SR 3, Box 187
Ripley, WV 25271
Located in rural Monroe County along the border of Greenbrier County, is the Nickell Farm with the c. 1820 homestead and the 1814 mill. The home is located off McClung Road on a hillside, with the farm fields and outbuildings behind it. The house faces the mill which is located at the bottom of the hillside along Second Creek.

Main House  c. 1820/1858/c. 1900  Contributing

The home is 2 ½ stories, with the original section being 3 bays, and the 1858 section also having 3 bays for a total of six front bays. Flemish bond brick is present on the oldest section, with a rounded molded brick on the entablature at the cornice line. S-shaped tie rods are inserted through the building, and the house sits on a stone foundation. The front brick corner has a large crack from lightening in the 1930s. Stone piers support the 55 foot long hipped porch, cement steps. Windows are 6/9 double-hung sash in the old section with panel doors having paneled reveals.

The 1858 section is frame in the front and brick in the rear from the c. 1820 kitchen wing. This older brick portion is gabled with a brick chimney. The original shape is clearly visible. A wooden slave kitchen had been attached also, but was removed due to deterioration in 1980. The second floor of this section had living quarters, and a rear shed porch with door and window.

The long real ell is c. 1900 with clapboard siding, a porch on the west side has been filled-in but the rear portion is a small room. On the east side is a long curved L-shaped hipped porch with 1/1 double-hung sash windows. The porch has Doric columns and a wood deck. There are eight openings with three doors, one leading to each room. The front c. 1820 section has 20th century casement windows to each side of the end chimney. Small windows in the attic flank the center chimney. The door onto the rear porch has a panel door with paneled reveals.

The interior of the c. 1820 section has wainscoting with panels along the hall and parlor walls. The second floor has incised lines along the wainscoting. The fireplace mantels have hand carved curves and dentils under the high mantel ledge. The stair trim has hand carved curves under the rail on the outside of the risers.

The rear c. 1900 ell has a higher wainscoting with pocket doors, and a center sitting room with heating stove. A butlers pantry has built-in drawers and shelves. The rear first floor bedroom also has a fireplace with mantel and tile. The back stairs depicts Queen Anne details and a central hall between the rear c. 1900 ell and the front section of the house. The stair trim has a spider web design, and curved steps from the landing. A Queen Anne window is on the landing. The doors have roundels on the corner blocks of the moulding.
Mill 1814 Contributing Horizontal wood siding, stone foundation, seamed metal gabled roof. Two stories with third center floor. Post and beam construction with pegging, whitewashed interior
   Some wooden hoppers, and chutes visible. Single burr stone probably used but stone is missing.
   Lower level with some metal wheels and gears, drive shaft across length of mill. Second floor with beams, general open plan but some wooden walls divide off sections. Windows are 6/6 double-hung, with some sashes still visible. There are a variety of vertical plank doors and windows throughout the building.

Barn c. 1940s Contributing
1 story, wood siding, metal gable roof

Machine Shed c. 1920s Contributing
1 story, wood siding, metal gable roof

Hog Shed c. 1900 Contributing
1 story, wood siding, metal gable roof

Garage c. 1920 Contributing
1 story, clapboard, metal gable roof

House by Mill c. 1920 Contributing 1 story, wood siding, metal roof, rear addition. Originally only having three rooms, the house has been extended.
The Nickel property is significant under Criteria A for Agriculture and Industry, and Criteria C for Architecture. The period of significance begins with the original c. 1820 home and its later additions, and the history of the Nickel mill until it closed in 1949. The property is closely associated with the Nickel family who were early settlers in Monroe County.

Thomas Nickel first settled in Monroe County in 1769, living in a log cabin on the property. Although family legend states that the brick house was built in 1794, no written evidence documents its presence. The design of the home and its interior is similar to several residences in Lewisburg which were built by John Dunn and Conrad Burgess during the 1820s. The farm at this time consisted of 550 acres, devoted to raising cattle, hogs, chickens, horses and crops of wheat and corn for feed. The Nickel’s home is one of the oldest in Monroe County, with the county boundary bordering on Greenbrier County enclosing a portion of the property. Thomas died in 1807 and his son, James Albert Nickel inherited the property.

James Albert Nickel continued farming the property. He also constructed the mill in 1814 along Second Creek below the farmhouse. The mill was one of several eventually built along the stream. A court order allowing the construction of a dam across the creek was secured by Nickel. Slave labor was used on the farm and probably in the operation of the mill.

The farm passed again to son James Madison Nickel in 1848, who continued the farm and milling operations, adding another mill on the upper end of the farm. James Madison is considered by the family as the most prominent member of the family. Considered as a kind slave owner, James tried to keep the families together, purchasing whole families and refusing to divide and sell. He also hired teachers to instruct both his children and slave children. A log building formerly next to the mill is depicted as the first school house in Monroe County in the Hardesty Encyclopedia. The building stood until sometime after 1910.

James Madison and his descendants were very active in the county holding public office, and serving in the military. Eventually, a small settlement developed close to the Nickel property with two general stores, carding shop, blacksmith, shoe shop, tannery, saw mill, cigar factory and post office. The Nickel’s mill provided flour and corn mill for this portion of Monroe County as well as nearby Greenbrier. James Madison Nickel was an elected Justice of the Peace in 1856, and again in 1860. He served in the Confederate Army as a captain in the Monroe Home Guard. The mill may have helped supply the Confederate Army as guards were posted during the war to prevent burning or destruction. Union forces still managed to burn the nearby original log home, tannery, and woolen mill.

The fourth generation to inherit the farm was son Charles Cora Nickel in 1886. Charles continued the operation of the farm and mill. He sold the upper mill in 1900, and deeded the present mill to Lyle Lacy Lee who was a child of Sarah Nickel and Joseph Lee. Although owned by Lee, the mill was still called Nickel’s Mill and worked by the Nickel family. Sarah was a sister of Charles Cora Nickel. The mill later closed in 1949. The farm, which then consisted of 500 acres, was left to Charles’s son, John Hinchman Nickel, in 1937. John owned and operated the farm until his death in 1964. He sold roughly 290 acres in 1955, and after his death another 65 acres were sold. The farm continued to be operated by his wife, Margaret, until her death in 1983. Currently members of the sixth generation are owners of the farm. The mill is now owned by the Merical family.

The architecture of the house is a classic early Federal with a central hall plan. The brick walls are 19" thick with molded brick used at the cornice line. A kitchen wing was attached to the side, with a frame section tacked on that was used by slaves for cooking and had living quarters above. A small rear porch allowed access from the brick kitchen to the wooden kitchen. This odd plan allowed a front room to be built across the kitchen wing to form a rectangular plan in 1858. This created two front entrances along the new long front porch.

The rear c. 1900 ell has Queen Anne details near the back porch entrance to the hall. The wing also has Colonial Revival details which mirror the earlier Federal period with roundels in the door corner blocks. The porch has Doric columns and a curved L-shape plan. The fireplace mantel and tile in the rear bedroom are common in well appointed West Virginia turn of the century homes. The interior of the Federal section has handcrafted details like the wainscoting, stairway, and fireplace mantels. The curved details do not match attesting to hand vs machine tooling.

The mill is also well crafted and was probably constructed by the family and farm workers. The stone foundation on the creek side is approximately 15 feet in height. The interior has hand hewn beams with mortise and tendon joints and pegging. A variety of chutes are still present and many of the metal gears. A small house was constructed c. 1920 for family and farm hands who helped work at the mill and on the farm. After the mill closed in 1949, it was sold and used as a summer cabin or camp.

Farming was the mainstay of the family, with fields laid in crops of grain, and used as pastures for stock. The current standing outbuildings are primarily early 20th century, with the barn, and machine shed holding farm equipment. The garage falls within the period of significance.

The homestead and mill are closely associated with the Nickell family, owners of the farm for over 200 years. The farm is a continuing operation in Monroe County. The mill served the small community along Second Creek and this section of Monroe and nearby Greenbrier County.
